SUBJECT: PAKISTAN MEDIA REACTION: FEBRUARY 02, 2010

Summary: Coverage of Army Chief General Kayani's statement that "Pakistan doesn't want to control Afghanistan," dominated headlines in all newspapers on Tuesday morning. President Obama's budget proposal for FY 2011 received wide coverage in Pakistani media, and nearly all papers highlighted reports that the administration has sought Congressional approval for a "substantial increase" in economic and security aid for Pakistan. Media also reported the arrest of an American national along with a Pakistani in Jamrud (Khyber Agency of FATA) for traveling without necessary documents. Speculation surrounding the reported death of Tehrik-i-Taliban Pakistan (TTP) Chief Hakimullah Mehsud continued to garner media coverage today. Some newspapers published a New York Times report that U.S. and Pakistani officials are "increasingly convinced" that Mehsud is dead, and "The News" reported that a local Taliban commander Malik Noor Jamal alias Maulana Toofan is officiating as the acting head of the banned outfit. Several major newspapers highlighted the U.S. donation of 40 ambulances to four district health departments. Both electronic and print media reported that the trial of Dr. Aafia has entered its final stage. All newspapers highlighted a suicide bomb explosion in Baghdad killing Shia pilgrims. End Summary.

"A female suicide bomber detonated her explosives inside a way station for pilgrims here on Monday, killing 54 people and rattling security officials who are struggling against a possible rise in violence before key elections next month. The attack was the third major strike by suspected insurgents in a week and left Baghdad's top security official acknowledging that extremists are adopting new methods to outwit bomb-detection squads such as stashing explosives deep inside the engines and frames of vehicles."

EDITORIALS/OPINIONS

Editorial: Dead Again, an editorial in the populist, often sensational national English daily "The News" (cir. 55,000) (02/02)

'The military has confirmed that it is investigating reports that Hakimullah Mehsud has died in Orakzai as a consequence of wounds inflicted during a recent drone strike. Determining the truth behind these rumors is hard given the inaccessibility of the areas hit by conflict. But what can safely be said is that evidence is emerging that the Taliban are more split than before."

Editorial: Hakeemullah Again, an editorial in the Lahore-based liberal English language daily "Daily Times" (cir. 10,000) (02/02)

". . . . What is interesting though is the facts that the news was announced on state television when routinely breaking news emanate from private news channels. While neither Pakistani or US officials nor ISPR was willing to confirm the report, PTV went ahead to air this news report, which could be termed as speculative at best in the absence of credible evidence. Whether it was an attempt to cause unrest among their ranks - as the Taliban claim - would become clear only after the dust has settled and proof has emerged that Hakeemullah is indeed dead, or otherwise. All one can do at this point is speculate."

Editorial: Policy Shift Needed, an editorial in the center-right national English daily "The Nation" (cir. 20,000) (02/02)

". . . West must be told in no uncertain terms to compensate Pakistan sufficiently for providing a yeoman's service in its war. But the government must also realise that it is finally the time to break ranks with the Americans. While they are packing up and leaving, given the humiliation that they have to suffer in Afghanistan, they want us to keep playing those ugly games. The drone attacks are intensifying a severe backlash. Reportedly, the US intends to continue the strikes for many years to come. The Foreign Minister must realise that this is a ploy to keep Pakistan embroiled in the conflict. The situation calls for removing these foreign policy dilemmas."

Opinion: Courting The Taliban, an op-ed by Rahimullah Yusufzai in the populist, often sensational national English daily "The News" (cir. 55,000) (02/02)

"As parties to the conflict in Afghanistan plot their next move following the international conference in London, Pakistan and Saudi Arabia have come under focus as the two countries best placed to bring the Afghan Taliban to the negotiating table. However, there is a crucial difference in the roles that Afghanistan and the US and its allies want to assign to Islamabad and Riyadh. While Saudi Arabia has been requested to mediate between the government of President Hamid Karzai and the Taliban, Pakistan among other neighbours of Afghanistan was asked to back the Afghan peace process. Islamabad was hoping to play an important role in resolving the Afghan conflict through its contacts with the Mulla Mohammad Omar-led Taliban, but it seems it isn't seen as a neutral player by the parties to the dispute and, therefore, unacceptable as mediator."

Opinion: Light At The End Of The Tunnel, an op-ed by Javid Husain in the center-right national English daily "The Nation" (cir. 20,000) (02/02)

". . . . At present neither the Taliban nor the coalition forces are in a position to prevail. They, therefore, need to make use of dialogue and negotiations to find a way out of the current difficult situation. There is increasing recognition of this reality by the US officials. For instance, US General Stanley McChrystal in a recent interview with the Financial Times remarked: "As a soldier, my personal feeling is that there's been enough fighting. I believe that a political solution to all conflicts is the inevitable outcome." He wanted "to shape conditions which allow the people to come to a truly equitable solution to how the Afghan people are governed." He also did not rule out the possibility of seeing Taliban leaders in a future government in Kabul. . . ."

Editorial: Preparation For An Operation In North Waziristan, an editorial note in the second-largest, nationalist Urdu daily "Nawa-i-Waqt" (cir. 150,000) (02/02)

"Foreign Minister Shah Mehmud Qureshi has said that after South Waziristan, there will be an operation in North Waziristan as well for which we are considering resources and other matters... During his recent visit to Pakistan, U.S. Defense Secretary Robert Gates pressed Pakistan for an operation in North Waziristan, a pressure that the government boldly rejected... But the Foreign Minister's intent to start an operation in North Waziristan has dashed the nation's hopes... War is not the solution to any issue and as Nato Commander Stanley McChrystal has said, there has been enough war in Afghanistan, we must now look for a political solution. If the U.S. is ready for talks with the Taliban, Pakistan should also resolve matters along the same lines with the extremists."

Editorial: Uncontrollable Increase In Petroleum Prices: Is The Government Paving The Way For A Bloody Revolution, an editorial in the second-largest, nationalist Urdu daily "Nawa-i-Waqt" (cir. 150,000) (02/02)

"The government must revise the decision to increase prices of petroleum products. The Supreme Court Chief Justice must also take suo moto notice of this cruelty on the Pakistani nation as this step by the government could take the society towards turmoil."
